Janice and Michele are having coffee at a new café.

Janice: So, what do you think of the coffee here, Michele?

Michele: It's pretty good. I got the fair-trade* Guatemala roast. How's yours?

Janice: Mine's nice, too. Did you realize that all the coffee here is fair-trade?

Michele: Oh, that's right. I totally forgot about that.

Janice: The fair-trade coffee market is growing these days, you know.

Michele: Really? But I heard the majority of coffee sold in the world is actually not fair-trade.

Janice: Yes, it seems like most people are happy getting a cheap cup of coffee and don't really care about the people who grow it or the environment where it comes from.

Michele: Not only that, but they probably don't even know which countries are the main coffee producers.

Janice: So true. I mean, do people even know where Guatemala is?

Michele: I doubt it. But in some countries, fair-trade products other than coffee are getting popular among consumers.

Janice: I imagine that tea is another one?

Michele: Yes, that's right. But there are others as well. Any ideas?

Janice: Well, how about bananas?

Michele: You got it. I read that in the UK, ethically sourced bananas make up about 35 percent of the market overall.

Janice: That much? What caused that?

Michele: A lot of it has to do with consumer pressure.

Janice: So, I guess that if people start demanding it, companies begin to take notice. I wish more businesses would get on board.

Michele: Yes, I'm definitely going to spread the word about this cafe for starters. I hope more people here will gain an understanding of the added value of fair-trade products.

Janice: Me too. If more people were aware that poverty could be decreased and environmental sustainability** could be achieved in producer countries by buying fair-trade goods, they might seek out such products more often.

Michele: I heard that one of the major chocolate manufacturers in the UK recently announced that only fair-trade certified cocoa beans would be used in their products from next year. Perhaps this will start a trend.

Janice: That's wonderful. I hope companies in our country will soon follow this, too.

RE: A message from the CEO

To all employees:

As many of you may already know, Best Brand International has been in the news recently as a result of an incident involving one of our employees. Specifically, an employee posted an inappropriate comment on his private social media account not realizing it was a shareable post. Subsequently, the post was shared widely on other social media platforms. Because his place of employment was public on his account, our company has become the target of negative publicity* with several online groups organizing boycotts of our products. We wanted to keep you aware of our ongoing response to the situation.

First, we have already taken disciplinary action against the employee by placing him on unpaid leave for six months. The employee has deleted all his social media accounts. Further, we have posted an apology on our official website and all social media accounts, all of which can be viewed at the below link.

<https://bestbrandinternational/csr/internalweb/apology/english/>

Additionally, we are working with organizations such as “Immigrants International” and “Together Immigration Global” to develop an in-house training workshop that all employees will be required to take. We hope these actions will prove that we are serious about supporting immigrant populations around the world. Our Corporate Social Responsibility Department** is also identifying how we can assist local immigrant communities through volunteer and fundraising activities.

Finally, an updated employee social media policy including additions for account privacy settings is being sent out in a separate email from the Human Resources Department***.

In closing, we would like to strongly remind you that your responsibility to Best Brand International does not end when you are off the clock****. We must always remember to honor our differences. Best Brand International will not tolerate discrimination including age, sex, race, color, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, citizenship, disability or any other legally protected basis under federal, state or local laws.

We know that together we can get through this challenging time in our company’s history and emerge stronger in the end.

Yours sincerely,

Janice A. Towlens

RE: A message from the CEO (UPDATE)

To all employees:

I am writing to give you further updates on the developing situation I described in an email earlier this week. Since then, we have been receiving increasing public pressure regarding the way we handled the situation with the employee. We have, therefore, decided to terminate the contract with him, effective immediately. We believe this is the most effective way to move forward.

Regrettably, I must also inform you that due to the downward trend we have experienced in US sales since this situation began, we are now forced to temporarily reduce our staff in all our American branches. Those employees affected by these cutbacks will be contacted later this week directly from the Human Resources Department.

As we navigate these trying times, we are hopeful that we will see better days soon.

Best regards,

Janice A. Towlens
