Jon and Eddie are talking on the topic of space exploration.

Jon: Hey Eddie. What are you up to?

Eddie: I'm just reading about Elon Musk's plan to build a full-size city on the surface of Mars. Can you believe that humans might actually have the chance to live on the Red Planet?

Jon: I've also heard about this. It sounds like a fun idea, but it also seems rather <sup>*1</sup>controversial. It's often in the news. I remember hearing that environmentalists believe it is having a negative impact on the local wildlife and ecosystem in Texas where the rockets are being launched. A lot of local animal and plant species are being endangered and there have been a few failed attempts where the rockets have exploded.

Eddie: There is always going to be risk of something going wrong when attempting something new, but in my opinion, it is an incredibly important venture for the future of life itself. We have so many challenges now on earth: overpopulation, food and energy shortages, and pollution. I think the benefits <sup>*2</sup>outweigh the risks. This project is also a way to help unite people. People are so divided at the moment, so this will inspire people. It says here that Elon Musk wants to move people's hearts.

Jon: Don't you think we should fix the problems we have here on earth first before going to another planet? After all, if we can't live here in a safe and sustainable way, how are we going to be able to live in space responsibly?

Eddie: What do you mean responsibly?

Jon: For example, space junk. It is said that there are approximately 27,000 pieces of <sup>*3</sup>debris in space now <sup>*4</sup>orbiting the earth. 23,000 of these are larger than a softball. Even tiny pieces can be extremely dangerous for objects such as satellites and the space station. They are very difficult to avoid and can be disastrous if they are hit. It seems that everywhere humans go we create pollution.

Eddie: I don't think you are looking at the bigger picture here, Jon. In order for our species to survive and flourish, we need to leave earth and explore space. Whilst I see your point, I'm afraid we have different opinions. There are many benefits of space exploration, too. Technologies used in space are often turned into products that we use as everyday products here on earth. Did you know the technology in your phone camera was developed in space? Also, science experiments performed in space have helped improve our understanding of medical conditions and satellites collect data that can be used to predict natural disasters such as typhoons.

Data from satellites can even be sent to emergency responders in the event of earthquakes and other disasters. The pros far outweigh the cons.

Jon: I guess you're right. After all, throughout history, humankind has always explored. From prehistoric humans first setting out from their caves to voyagers sailing to faraway lands, risking hardships to discover new places. The next logical step is venturing to outer space.

(注) *<sup>1</sup>controversial 論争の余地のある *<sup>2</sup>outweigh 上回る
*<sup>3</sup>debris がれき *<sup>4</sup>orbit . . . の周りを回る

問 1 ( 1 1 )

According to the conversation, what has Jon heard?

- ① Space exploration is beneficial to the Texas environment.
- ② Space exploration will lead to higher state taxes.
- ③ A few rockets have had failed attempts but have never exploded.
- ④ Many different wildlife species have been put in danger.

問 2 ( 1 2 )

Eddie believes...

- ① building a full-size city on the surface of Mars does not have any risks.
- ② a mission to Mars will help people on earth work together more.
- ③ overpopulation, food and energy shortages, and pollution will be problems on Mars.
- ④ we should fix the problems on earth first before travelling to Mars.

問 3 ( 1 3 )

Which of the following is true?

- ① There are about 50,000 pieces of garbage in space.
- ② The total number of pieces of garbage in space is around 27,000.
- ③ Having space junk orbiting earth is responsible and sustainable.
- ④ Most of the space debris consists of objects, such as satellites.

問 4 ( 1 4 )

Which word is the closest in meaning to the underlined word "flourish"?

- ① wonderful
- ② environment
- ③ pollution
- ④ grow

問5 ( 15 )

Which is the correct order for the history of exploration according to the conversation?

- ① Sailing to faraway places → Setting out from caves → Traveling to outer space
- ② Setting out from caves → Traveling to outer space → Sailing to faraway lands
- ③ Sailing to faraway lands → Traveling to outer space → Setting out from caves
- ④ Setting out from caves → Sailing to faraway places → Traveling to outer space

第3問 次のチラシとメールの文面を読み、以下の設問に答えなさい。
答えは ( 16 ) から ( 20 ) に入るものとして最適なものを①、②、③、④の中から一つ選び、その番号を解答用紙の所定欄にマークしなさい。

Subject: Sponsorship offer

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to you after having seen your request for sponsors on your university *<sup>1</sup>flier. We are *<sup>2</sup>delighted to announce to you that we can offer sponsorship for your upcoming photo contest.

We are *<sup>3</sup>dedicated to fostering new artistic talent and believe that your university photo contest would be perfect to showcase talent from our local community.

To help support your event, we would like to offer the prize money as a donation as well as provide the winners and runners-up with digital photo albums as further prizes. In return, we ask that Sakurai University displays our promotional signs and pamphlets during the contest.

To accept this offer and discuss any further details, please get in touch with me directly on 080-787-7878 at your earliest convenience.

Yours sincerely,

Jonathan Trigger
